WOMEN AND WORK.
(Globe.)
The weavers at Kidderminater who objected to the employment of women at tapeatry looms; have gained their object. The offending firm thre consented to take down the looms; and the men graciously announce that they resume work, trusting to their employers "sense of honour" to carry out their promise. The movement has not reflected much credit on the good feeling of the workmen. They were informed on the best authority that the employment of women would in no way interfere with their prosperity. Either, however, they refused to believe this, or they were resolved to check the first symptoms of a desire on the part of women to become their rivals. It is to be feared a good, deal of this jealousy of female work exists among others besides weavers. Women naturally do not look at the matter from the same point of view; and it is hard to see why they should not be at liberty to make the most of their energies, no matter whether their doing so affects the rate of men's wages or not. An association has recently been formed for the purpose of protecting their interests. It originated, we learn, "in an effort to approxim te more nearly the wages of the tailoresses of Bristol to the labour price -paid-in-that-city-to-men-in-the-trade.Ite objects are to improve the general condition of working women by increasing their rate of wages and lessening the hours of labour; to form districts and branches, and to enable the deficiency of labour in one place to be promptly supplies by the surplus in another; to exercise supervision over any existing Acts of the Legislature which may injuriously affect the employment of women, and to oppose by every-legal means any future legislation of the same tendency; and to create a benefit fund for the members in case of sickness, accident, or death, We know nothing of the working of the association; but, if properly conducted, it may find plenty of scope for energetio and useful activity.
